E. O. ALLEN CAUGHT.

Man Who So Skillfully Escaped From Sheriff Keown.

Arrested in Bowling Green With a Circus Show.

E. O. Allen, has been arrested at Bowling Green, and will be held pending the arrival of a requisition which will take him to Illinois, where he is wanted for the alleged theft of some jewelry.

Allen formerly lived in Owensboro and worked for the Owensboro Pants Manufacturing company, he left soon after the fire.

In short time it was learned that he was wanted in Illinois for the robbery of a jewelry store. He had come to Ohio county among his relatives, and Sheriff Keown learning of the fact, went after him. Allen was captured after a hard chase and placed on the train en route to Owensboro. Suddenly the prisoner threw himself out the window and was gone. The sheriff pulled the bell rope to stop the train, but it went some distance before it could be brought to a stand. Sheriff Keown then chased his man for several miles, at first on foot and then on horseback, but he got away.

Sheriff Keown never gives up when he gets after a criminal, and he felt sure that he would get him in the end. His former home was watched and his friends were kept under surveillance. At last it was learned that Allen was with a circus, and was thought to be working a bunco game on farmers. There are many circuses, and Sheriff Keown got a list of those with dates in this State. He notified the officers at Bowling Green that Allen would probably be there with a circus that appeared there Saturday and as soon as the show arrived they commenced looking for him. He was not found until the close of the night performance, when he was arrested. The officers say that Allen is an all-round crook and they expect him to get a long sentence in Illinois.

DUKE SUED FOR DIVORCE.

Daughter of Levi P. Morton Begins Proceedings.

Paris, June 6.—In consequence of differences between the Duke and Duchess of Valencay, steps have been taken to dissolve the marriage.

The Duchess was Helen Morton, a daughter of Levi P. Morton, of New York. It is learned in authoritative quarters to-night that the Duke's mother, having asked the sanction of the Pope of an annulment on the ground that the marriage had been without issue, the Duchess has applied to the civil courts for a legal dissolution, the grounds being withheld for the present.

The Duke, who is a scion of the ancient and princely house of Talleyrand-Sagen, is at his magnificent chateau on the Loire.

The Duchess is in Paris at the family residence adjacent to the boulevard St. Germain. She is in constant communication with her father, who has been here for some time.

Close friends have long realized than an estrangement had taken place, for the Duke stayed continually at his chateau, while the Duchess remained in Paris.

Thus far only members of the two families and other intimate friends are aware of the steps that have been taken.

Barnett-Foster.

Last Friday's issue of the Johnson County Herald published at Clarksville, Arkansas, contains the following announcement:

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Foster announce the marriage of their daughter, Fannie, and Mr. U. C. Barnett, to take place on the afternoon of June 22, 1904.

This is our own U. C. and his many friends here will receive the announcement of his coming nuptials with the kindest remembrance for him. His sterling worth and true manhood has endeared him to many of Ohio county's people. Especially is Mr. Barnett popular in the various sections of the county where he has taught school.

He has been absent from our country and State for the past two or three years in Arkansas, where he has been engaged in teaching.

DEMOCRATIC POW-WOW.

Handful of the Utterly Comes Together in Court Hall and Resolute.

Saturday at 1 o'clock the local politicians together with some dozen out-of-town Democrats assembled in the court hall and were called to order by chairman T. J. Smith who made a happy little speech, after which W. H. Barnes was elected chairman by a majority of fifteen (receiving all the votes).

He then appointed the usual committee on resolutions. The committee retired, leaving Ben Ringo in the hall. After repeated calls by himself for himself he got up and addressed himself.

He was liberally applauded. Gradually his voice became fainter and weaker until it eventually pattered out, and the hall became as silent as the body when the spirit has departed.

Ere long the committee filed into the convention hall and read a leaf torn from an ancient report of the secretary of agriculture. This was adopted as the sentiment of the convention amid thunders of applause.

The convention then took up the question "Who struck Billy Patterson," and argued it at great length.

One delegate took the ground that it was W. R. Hearst, and delivered a speech in advocacy of his theory which, if reduced to manuscript, would cover the Jackson purchase.

The previous question was called for, and the resolution was carried. The convention then adjourned to meet again in the remote subsequently.

A BRIEF SUMMARY

Of The Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Baptist Association.

The fifth Sunday meeting of the Ohio county Baptist Association was held at the Hartford Baptist church May 28 and 29, 1904. At 10 o'clock on Saturday, the meeting was called to order by the chairman, Rev. E. W. Coakley. After the devotional service officers were elected for the meeting. Rev. E. W. Coakley was chosen chairman, O. M. Shultz, Secretary J. N. Jarnagin Treasurer.

The program was vigorously carried out. Many of the discussions developed a great deal of interest which will result in great good to the churches represented.

The following brethren took leading parts in the discussion of the various topics: E. W. Coakley, B. F. Jenkins, Felix Lake, L. P. Drake, J. D. Maddox, J. P. Miller, J. T. Casebier, J. H. Burnett, T. J. Acton, J. N. Jarnagin, Norris Lashbrooks and O. M. Shultz.

Sunday morning Rev. W. P. Harvey, of Louisville, delivered a strong sermon on some distinctive Baptist doctrine. The house was packed to overflowing, many visitors from a distance being present. Sunday afternoon was observed as a memorial service to Dr. J. S. Coleman, deceased, the founder of the Hartford church. A number of appropriate talks were made in which his noble life and deeds of self sacrifice for the cause of Christ were vividly recounted.

The meeting was well attended, many visitors from sister churches being present.

The next meeting will be held the fifth Sunday in July.

THE CROPS.

Improved Condition Reported in the State.

Extremely Favorable Weather Gave All Kinds of Products a Fine Start.

The following is the weekly crop report, issued by the weather bureau at Louisville:

The weather was very favorable during the week. Abundant rains were followed by high temperatures and all crops made rapid advancement.

Wheat has improved greatly. As a whole the yield will be considerably below the average.

The weather conditions during the week were excellent for tobacco setting. A large part of the crop was put out and is starting off nicely.

Corn advanced rapidly. A good stand has been secured in most places and the warm nights during the latter part of the week caused a very rapid growth.

Rye has made good progress and oats have improved.

Gardens have improved and are now in good condition. Potatoes are very promising.

Apples and peaches are making a better showing than was expected, but will not make nearly a full crop.

Pastures and meadows show great improvement.

Hemp is doing well, and millet and cowpeas are making good advancement.

Farm work is generally well up, but in some localities the rainfall has been so heavy as to interfere with cultivating crops and, as a result, the weeds are getting a good start.

CAPT. TRACY INJURED.

Fell Forty Feet Down Elevator Shaft in Custom House at Louisville.

Daniel F. Tracy, an assistant custodian at the customhouse at Louisville, fell from the top of an elevator at the third floor of the customhouse Monday a distance of about forty-five feet, and was severely but not fatally hurt.

His right hip and right arm were broken and it is feared that his spine has been injured.

He never lost consciousness, despite the long fall and painful injuries and as he was lying on a couch at the customhouse before being taken to Norton Infirmary, he turned to Mr. O. A. Beckmann, and said, "Well, I guess I am done for now."

Capt. Tracy was on top of an elevator car tightening a bolt. It is supposed that his wrench slipped and caused him to lose his balance and fall. Men who were working near the elevator shaft heard him cry out, "Lock out." A terrible crash followed, and it was soon discovered what had happened.

The injured man was quickly conveyed to Norton Infirmary where his injuries were treated.

Capt. Tracy is a former citizen of Hartford and has many relatives and friends here, who learned of his unfortunate injury with much sorrow.

LATER.—Wednesday's daily brought us the intelligence that Capt. Tracy was improving and thought to be out of danger.

AT LIVERMORE

Officers Looking For Alleged Assimilator of Others' Money.

Livermore, Ky., June 4.—The police of this place are searching for a man by the name of Richard Roberts, who is accused of stealing $20 from a family boat owned by Sam Price, says the Owensboro Messenger. Last Wednesday while Price was eating his dinner Roberts came in and asked if he could lay down on the bed, saying he was sick, and Price consented.

A pair of Price's pants were on the bed with the money in the pockets. After a few minutes Roberts left and when Price went to get his money it was gone. He at once suspected Roberts and accused him, but he denied it.

On the same evening Roberts took a woman acquaintance to Quigley Bros.' store where she spent $10 dollars of money. When the girl was questioned she at first denied it, but afterwards acknowledged that Roberts had given her the $10 and that she spent it.

Price immediately placed out a writ against Roberts and placed it in the hands of Marshal Buckley.

As soon as Roberts found out that there was a writ against him he left the town and went over in Ohio county, on "The Point," and sent word back that if they would not have him arrested he would send the $20 to Price.

Marshal Buckley has sent word to the sheriff of Ohio county to come down and arrest Roberts, but he will not do it.

It is thought Roberts will be arrested in a few days, as his father lives at Livermore and he will soon return home.

The above article was shown to Sheriff Keown's office Deputy and he authorized us to say that no warrant or request from any one had come to him for the arrest of the party mentioned.

For the next 30 days we will sell Flour and Meal at wholesale prices to the retail trade.

We can and will sell you Flour from 50 cents to $1.00 cheaper on the barrel than you can buy it anywhere else in Ohio county.

We can and will sell you old-fashioned buckwheat Corn Meal, made of the very best white corn for from 5c to 15c less on the bushel than you can buy it anywhere else in Ohio county.

We have the best mill in Ohio county, and have employed an expert miller, Mr. P. T. Proffit, of Virginia, to take charge of our grinding department, and he is a gentleman of the finest type and knows how to, and will treat you right.

We want all the custom trade we can get, and will give as much Flour for a bushel of wheat as any other mill.

Farmers, Don't Forget This. And we give good

Four, too, for we do not intend to grind anything but good, sound wheat.

Please don't bring us any other kind of wheat but good wheat.

We are always in the market for good wheat, and pay the highest market prices for it.

So, Mr. Farmers, when you thrash your new crops of wheat and you have any to sell, don't forget that you can sell it to us for highest market price.

We pay Cash, and sell for cash or its equivalent,

UNCLE SAM MAY CONTROL.

World's Fair Company Must Pay Back Loan.

On Their Failure To Do So Government Will Take Charge.

HOT WEATHER, NERVOUS WOMEN.

St. Louis, June 7.—In a letter received by the Exposition Company today, Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasurer, gave formal notification that if payments on the $4,600,000 Government loan are not promptly forthcoming when due, he, as the guardian of the State Treasurer, would take charge of the receipts and collection of fair tickets.

The letter formally reminds the Exposition Company of the date for the payment of the first installment of the loan, and, inclosed a copy of the rules governing the loan and repayment. These rules set forth that the loan of $4,600,000 was made to the Exposition Company in the months of February, March, April and May, 1904 and that in return the Government is to have a first lien on the receipts of the fair from paid admissions and concession privileges.

Payments are to be made each half month, the first payment June 15, when 40 per cent. of the gross receipts from June 1 to June 15 shall be surrendered. Thereafter at the first and fifteenth of each month 40 per cent. of the receipts for the previous half month shall be paid, and it is further provided that after the 1st of July the semi-monthly payments shall not be less than $500,000 each.

SOLUTION.

Of the Bedford Murder Mystery Believed to be Coming.

Strong Evidence is in Possession of the Grand Jury.

Bedford, Ind., June 3.—It is believed that the Schaefer murder mystery will yet be solved.

The grand jury which is investigating the murder is now in possession of what is said to be strong evidence which is expected materially to assist in an early solution of the crime. Judge Wilson says it will be necessary, under law, for the grand jury to adjourn Saturday night as the present term of court ends at that time.

Miss Eva Love, a teacher in the public schools and a roommate of Miss Schaefer, appears to be one of the chief figures around whom the grand jury is working. Several women have been before the jury and practically all of them are friends of Miss Love. Mrs Frank Ellis, known to have been an intimate friend of Miss Love, was the first of these to appear in the jury room, and the report was current that the jury would inquire further into the relations thought to have existed between Miss Love and Miss Schaefer than did the jury which indicted McDonald.

Ham Stout, a night watchman at the Brooks and Carter store mill, will be a witness. It is alleged that about 9:30 o'clock on the night of the murder he discovered a stranger on top of the boiler of the engine room. Stout fired a revolver at the man's head, who fell to the ground badly frightened. The stranger's clothing was wet, he having been out in a heavy rain. He refused to give his name to the night watchman who demanded the visitor's business at the mill. The stranger said he had been piloted to the mill by a certain party (the one now under suspicion), who opened the door leading to the boiler-room, commanding him to climb upon the boiler and dry his clothes. The stranger gave no satisfactory explanation of the business which took him into the rain.

He told Stout he was a workman on the Bloomfield branch of the Monon but this statement when investigated, proved to be untrue. He said he and the man now under suspicion had been "out on a lark."

It later developed that the man with whom the stranger had been was the purchaser of the half pint of Canadian whisky, the empty flask in which it was carried having been found near the cab shed where Miss Schaefer lost her life. The grand jury is expected to thoroughly probe this phase of the case, which was worked up by Myers, policeman, who was prevented from testifying to these points in the McDonald trial because of objections from the State.

Subpoenas have been issued for the editors and publishers of the Brazil Democrats to appear before the grand jury and tell where they obtain information published in a recent editorial in that newspaper.

B. S. Lowe said this morning that he would add $500 to the reward fund offered for the apprehension of Miss Schaefer's murderer. Ed Thornton, a stone operator, also subscribed $500. The fund now aggregates $5,250.

Sketch of Gen. Hill. Samuel Ewing Hill, who passed quietly to rest at the home of his daughter at Lexington last Friday, was born at Morgantown, Ky., January 30, 1841. He was a son of Judge Daniel S. Hill, a prominent citizen of that place and at his death county judge of Ohio county. General Hill's parents were natives of Butler county, but were of Virginia parentage. He was reared in Hartford, Ohio county, on a farm and from his 10th to his 18th year attended, at intervals, Hartford Seminary. In August, 1862, he enlisted in the company raised by his brother, Capt. John W. Hill, which belonged to the Twelfth Kentucky Union Cavalry, commanded by Q. C. Shanks. He was appointed orderly sergeant, served eighteen months, then on the death of his brother (who was killed at Knoxville, in the service), he was unanimously elected captain of the same company, a fact that he often spoke of with pride. He served with this company through the war, took part in the pursuit of Morgan in his raids through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio; was with Burnside in his campaign of 1863-1864; with Sherman in 1864; and, after the fall of Atlanta, was with Stoneman in his expedition against the salt works of Virginia and remained with him until the close of the war. He was breveted Major by the Governor of Kentucky for meritorious conduct on the field; was mustered out of service in 1865, and returned to Kentucky and entered the law office of Hon. H. D. McHenry, of Hartford. He was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1866, but continued his studies until October of that year; was then admitted to the senior class of the Louisville Law School, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1867, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Law. He then returned to Hartford and entered into a partnership with Hon. J. W. Kinchloe, with whom he remained until 1872, the partnership being dissolved by mutual consent on the first of January of that year. General Hill, uniting with his former preceptor, H. D. McHenry, with whom he remained for several years.

General Hill represented the county of Ohio in the State Senate for twelve years and was the only Democrat who ever went to the Senate from that district. He was also Adjutant General of the State under Governor Simon Bolivar Buckner and it was by virtue of this office that he received his title of General.

General Hill went to Lexington in the year 1892 and entered upon the practice of his profession and for fourteen years was a prominent member of the Fayette county bar. About seven years ago he was appointed United States Commissioner for that district and since then had very creditably held this office.

He was a man of many friends and those who knew him became attached to him by more than ordinary ties. He was a man of attractive intellectual attainments and was widely read and learned in his profession. His nature was sunny and no clouds were dark enough to cast a gloom over his genial disposition.

Bribery.

Russel Sage was, in early life, an errand boy in a Troy cigar store.

At a certain directors' meeting, referring to his boyhood days in Troy, Mr. Sage said:

"I remember well a frequent visitor to our Troy grocery, a rich young farmer from Schaghticoke. He had fallen in love with a new York girl who had spent the summer in Schaghticoke, and in the autumn he called on her in the city and proposed marriage.

"The story goes that as soon as she refused him, the young man put on his hat and stalked out of the house. Once outside, though, an idea struck him, and, returning, he said:

"Would the tower of Europe be any inducement?"

BLACK - DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their feed. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If you do not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturer, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCKVILLE, Ga., Jan. 20, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was running bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting no fine. They are looking 20 per cent better.

B. P. BROCKINGTON.

JAMES HOWARD.

Story of the Killing of George Baker, And How He Has Been Slandered.

Two interesting letters concerning the Howard Defence Fund were received by the Louisville Herald recently. One was from a "Jackson Democrat," 84 years old inclosing $5 for the appeal for fair play. The other was properly enough, anonymous, and contains this statement:

"You might be putting your time and paper to better uses than collecting money for assassin Jim Howard, who has killed other men before Goebel. I would not give a cent to save his life from the rope."

We pass over the uncharitableness of the spite behind these words. The writer of them seemed instinctively to be so ashamed of them that he would not sign his name.

It is undoubtedly the fact, however that there are many persons who have been led by unspiring abuse of Howard to believe that he is an assassin, with a record of a man-killer, merely because, when he went to Frankfort at the time Mr. Goebel was so foully slain, he was seeking a pardon for the killing of George Baker, who has been described throughout as "old man Baker." One of the outrageous wrongs perpetrated on Howard in his first trial was in permitting the prosecution to ask the question whether he had not killed "old man Baker" while the latter was on his knees begging for his life. Of course, the question was ruled out but it had been asked and the injury was done in allowing the idea to be established that Jim Howard had wantonly murdered George Baker. Democratic papers have harped on him as an assassin until the idea that he is one has become more or less prevalent.

It is true that Jim Howard did kill George Baker. He has never denied it. He has admitted it before three juries before whom he was tried for the act and he justified himself. So much so that three juries refused to convict disagreeing, and the Judge and the Commonwealth's Attorney had determined before the next trial to dismiss the indictment on the ground that no jury would convict, and that he was justified. The story of George Baker's death involves a cruel episode, but the cruelty was not Howard's.

Jim Howard was teaching school at Manchester, in Clay county, six or seven years ago, a respected and well-behaved citizen, when late one night a friendly messenger arrived with the information that Howard's father, brother and forest-brother had been ambushed and assassinated by George Baker and some follows on the road near Baker's house. Baker would not even permit the bodies to be removed from the road where they lay, and where, in their dying agony, he had brutally stamped their faces with his boot-heels. He had announced that the bodies should lie there "until the hogs or the buzzard ate them," and sent that word tauntingly to Jim Howard.

At daylight next morning Jim Howard mounted the messenger's horse armed with a Winchester rifle and two revolvers, and set out to rescue his dead. He was stopped near the scene of the murder by friends who confirmed the message he had received, and told him the bodies were still being watched in the road by the murderers and that if he went to the scene he would be waylaid. Howard pushed on, however, and when near Baker's house was fired upon and found himself in ambush. A skillful horseman, a brave and cool man he threw himself upon his horse's neck and galloped through the ambush. Just as he was turning a bend in the road he suddenly met George Baker approaching also on horseback. Baker went into his hostlers, or saddlebags, for his pistol, but Howard was too quick for him and shot him through the body. As Baker was falling from his horse he asked Howard not to shoot again, but Howard shot him again as he called out and killed him.

By this time Howard's friends had followed him down the road and Baker's followers retreated. When Howard reached the bodies of his father and brothers he found their faces cruelly mutilated, and the heels of George Baker's boots were smeared with their blood. The elder Howard was still alive, and had lain in the road eighteen hours without a drop of water or any attention. The two brothers were dead. The elder

It is difficult to predict just what issues the desperate Democracy will force to the front in their effort to displace and to repudiate those which they declared to be of paramount importance in 1896 and again in 1900. But so far as the tariff is concerned Republicans need have no fear. If the tariff is to be trumps in the coming game of politics, that is our last stand, and we may safely count on both points and honors when the score is made up.

Poor Hair

Howard recovered, after months of nursing.

This is the story that Jim Howard told before three juries, confirmed by his father and his friends. It is full of savagery, but the savagery was not Howard's. It was Baker's. In that mountain land, where men have stern and peculiar standards of personal responsibility and conduct, his action was approved by public opinion; but in any standard of civilization the access of fury which such a deed as Baker's would produce in a son and brother would have excused his summary though sudden vengeance. This story the Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney of the court in which he was tried, who were present at Howard's last trial on the charge of killing Mr. Goebel, were prepared to prove in its substance. Besides this, George Baker was not an old man. He was 52 or 53 and in the full vigor of life and activity, a physical giant with a reputation as a dangerous antagonist.

The killing of George Baker for the savage assassination of his brothers was the sole charge of any nature against Howard previous to the incredible impossibilities alleged against him in the Goebel case. If there had been no politics in the Goebel case any jury in the State would have acquitted him without leaving their seats.

It is time that the groundless and cruel story that this man is an experienced man-killer should be denied. He was a school teacher, with ambition to rise in the world. He bears upon his face and in his manner the stamp of a man with indomitable courage, and the indescribable accent of the truthful man unafraid is in his voice. To him even Judge Cantrell has always shown respect and courtesy. Mrs. Youtsey when she left the stand, unpermitted to testify as to his innocence, walked over to where he sat in the dock and shook his hand. Not one of his counsel who has not held him in esteem and sympathy. None of his jailers who has not held him in respect. A man who has the qualities that inspire such recognition in adversity and crushing misfortune is not of the stuff of which assassins are made.

Jim Howard faces a fate worse than death. He is an innocent man facing that fate, and we do not believe Kentuckians will desert him until he has had his last appeal passed on by an uprejudiced court at Washington.

No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

Kentucky Day at World's Fair

Full of Stirring

Events.

The plans for Kentucky Day—Wednesday, June 15—at the World's Fair are rapidly maturing. Indications point to this day as being one of the greatest in the history of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Two special trains will run from Louisville, one on the night of June 13, carrying the Kentucky Press Association, and one on the night of June 14, made up of the Louisville business men. This train will have a private car attached with Governor J. C. W. Beckman, his staff and State officials on board, together with a committee of three from the battleship Kentucky. Both the editors' train and the business men's special will run over the Henderson Route to St. Louis.

On Tuesday, which is June 14, the editors will do a little sight-seeing and in the afternoon be entertained at the Woman's Magazine Building outside the grounds. On that night they will see "The Pike."

On Kentucky day the editors will hold an informal session at 10 o'clock in the morning, followed by a tour of the grounds in automobiles and on intramural System, winding up at one o'clock with a luncheon probably at the east pavilion, which is being conducted by Mrs. Rorer, the famous cook-book woman.

Peasants In the Village Lead a Forlorn Existence These Days.

Social Service

As a rule a Russian village is a forlorn looking place, where the huts of the poor are made of birch logs, with upright oak or pine supporters, ceiling of strips of the same birch and walls lined with the crude branches in these huts there are only two rooms, one of which is not big every day use, but is kept for occasions. This room houses the sacred images so dear to the heart of every member of the Greek church, to which belong the great mass of the Russian people.

The other room serves the purpose of both kitchen and sleeping room, as one of the principal ideas of comfort to these people, ice and snowbound for so many months of the year, is warmth. In many of the peasant huts no beds are used and the top of a great stove, reaching nearly to the roof, is a much sought sleeping place. Although the conditions make dirt and accompanying ills inseparable in the life of these peasants, they are devotedly fond of bathing. The vapor bath in a crude form may be called a national institution and a not unusual picture of a summer afternoon is the village pond filled with women and children bathers.

Asks the readers of this paper to test the value of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Those persons who have been cured by it do not hesitate to recommend it to their friends. Kodol digests what you eat, cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Increases strength by enabling the stomach and digestive organs to contribute to the blood all of the nutriment contained in the food. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is pleasant and palatable.

The Death Sentence in England.

18th June, 1861.
The present agitation in England to abolish the pronouncing of the death sentence in cases where it is patent that capital punishment will not follow will probably meet with the approbation of most people, who desire that the law should lose nothing of its dignity and at the same time have nothing of unnecessary horror added. The Lord Chancellor pleads for the retention of the form, saying that the passing of the death sentence will act as a deterrent. James I. giggled with death sentences in this manner and got himself rather badly disliked for it. Over the plot in which Raleigh, Cobham, Grey and others, were implicated he had the less pulsant ones put to death and "very bloodily handled." Cobham's brother was beheaded "like a gentleman." The Bishop of Chester, with the blood of the latter still upon him, went then to Lord Cobham. Him the bishop exhorted to confession. Other prelates were similarly engaged with Sir Walter Raleigh and Lord Grey. Meantime Markham, another of the conspirators, had been placed upon the scaffold and was about to bow his head to the ax when the Sheriff was called away by a Scotch hireling, and the prisoner left to contemplate the ax for an hour. Then he was led away and told to prepare for death at the end of two hours. Grey's turn was next. He prayed half an hour before the block, then raised himself to die—and was led away, the King sending word that the order of execution had been changed. So forth came Cobham, and having made his last declaration, prepared to take farewell of the world, when the Sheriff stayed the execution and brought forth Markham and Grey—all three thinking that the other two had been executed. They were told, after having suffered the agony of all but death itself, that their lives would be spared. Raleigh's experience was similar. That was how they used to make death sentences act as "a deterrent" in the good old days. There would be danger for those who tried a repetition to day.

Immense Log Shipment.

Lexington News.
The largest shipment of logs that ever came down the Kentucky river passed through Lock No. 5 the first of this week, blocking the river for a distance of ten miles, and passing steamers had to stop in their course until the rafts could be prised aside sufficiently to afford them passage. In all these rafts contained 60,000,000 feet of white oak timber, all of which is destined for the shipyards at Liverpool, Eng'nd. The largest log is sixty feet in length, and is squared to thirty inches, containing 4,500 feet of lumber, and there is no piece in this lot which is less than forty feet in length. The timber will be taken to Cincinnati, where it will be loaded on cars and taken to the seaboard. This is the first run made on a contract of 180,000,000 feet of timber to be taken from Casey county, and all shipped to the same parties. All timbers are squared before starting from the forest. The sixty-foot piece is said to be the largest single stick that ever came down the river.

Fight Will be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall, Miss., says: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once and four bottles entirely cured her. Guaranteed by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., druggists. Price 50c, and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Testing of a Battleship.

It is an anxious yet proud moment for the builders and designers of a big battleship when the tests are about to be applied, which are to expose her faults, if any, lay bare her secret tellings, and bring to the surface the manifold queer whims and caprices to which vessels, like horses, are peculiarly prone. The skill and labor of many months are about to undergo the ordeal of the most searching investigation which science and human foresight can apply, and a big check is about to change hands.

In view of the fact that one of the most powerful battleships ever launched, the Shikishima belonging to Japan, may play a very prominent part in the war into which that country and Russia are plunged, it may be interesting to review the trials which this splendid war leviathan underwent before being handed over by the Thames Ship building Company to her purchasers.

A complete staff of artificers, stokers and a small crew of quaint looking, but smart and seamanlike Japanese sailors (who were eventually to work the ship back to the little Empire in the far East) stood under orders, prepared for any emergency which might arise, and preparations were made for the first trial, slow speed. After a six hours' run at two-thirds speed this test was pronounced satisfactory, and, as a matter of fact, it is the least formidable of the series in the eyes of interested parties. Then steering enthusiasts experimented with the steam gear which actuates the rudder, performed evolutions at startling angles and pronounced it excellent.

Next day, after the boilers had been carefully cleaned and overhauled, the engines were put at their top notch for speed and endurance, and no doubt during the run—ten miles—the anxieties of the engine room authorities were neither few nor trifling. But in justice to the British engineer it must be admitted that, while not exactly welcoming difficulties, he is seldom happier than when successfully meeting them.

Meanwhile the drafts of water were being carefully noted, weights and board being verified, for all deficient armament, stores, etc., have been made up in water ballast and coal, the experts want to know to a pound how much of this precious fuel, which, by the way, is specially hand picked and selected, is being consumed to maintain the steam pressure.

FORTUNE TELLING

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. There is many a woman whose future seems absolutely clouded who is marked by her own condition for future disappointment and distress.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Dr. Pierce offers $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of the above diseases. His "Prescription" has been so successful in curing thousands of cases in the past third of a century that he makes this remarkable offer to show his confidence.

"I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miles M. Ely, of Orrville, Ohio, "and am now well. The Pleasant Pellets as you advised for congested uterus, ovaries and weakness, and can safely say that your medicine has been the means of restoring me to good health again which I had not had for over three years until taking your medicine. I thank you very much for your kind and prompt attention to my letter asking advice."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases.

or Shropshire animal. At this ratio one bushel of corn worth 50 cents will increase the money value of a sheep to ten pounds, and fat mutton at about 12 cents a pound.

This is about twice as much gain of money value in sheep as in beef animals taken on with the same quantity of feed. This makes sheep raising about 20 per cent. more profitable than cattle. With such facts as these the farmers of the South should not only increase their flocks, but should secure rams of the most compact forms and finest wool and mutton strains.

Free Mail Delivery.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow returned to the Post Office Department a few days ago after several weeks' absence in the West and Southwest. Mr. Bristow made an observation trip over the rural delivery routes of Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Texas and other States for the purpose of becoming personally familiar with rural free delivery service.

Before departing Mr. Bristow had considered plans for a reorganization of the service. It is known that he doubted the wisdom of maintaining such an extensive system.

Since his trip, however, he has reached the important conclusion that the rural service cannot possibly be curtailed, and he will lay before the Postmaster General in a few days a complete plan for a vast extension of the system. Mr. Bristow told the Postmaster General that everywhere he went he found the people heartily in favor of rural delivery. The farmer, he said, was its strongest advocate, and so popular has the service become that it will be necessary to ask Congress to make a liberal appropriation for its extension. He pointed out particularly the great benefit of the service to the publishers of daily newspapers, explaining that it brought the newspapers to the farmer's door and kept him in close touch with the outside world.

Weak Hearts

Are due to Indigestion. Ninety-nine of every hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple Indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of Indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: "I had stomach trouble and was in bad shape as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me."

KATE BONNET

THE ROMANCE OF A PIRATE'S DAUGHTER

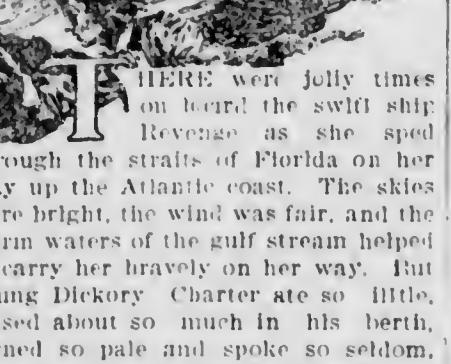

BY FRANK R. STOCKTON

Copyright, 1882, by D. Appleton & Co., New York.

CHAPTER XXII

DICKORY STRUCK HIS LEGS

HERE were jolly times on board the swift ship Revenge as she sped through the straits of Florida on her way up the Atlantic coast. The skies were bright, the wind was fair, and the warm waters of the gulf stream helped to carry her bravely on her way. But young Dickory Charter ate so little, tossed about so much in his berth, turned so pale and spoke so seldom, that the bold Capt. Blackbeard declared that he should have some medicine.

"I shall not let my fine lieutenant suffer for want of drugs," he cried, "and when I reach Charles Town I shall send ashore a boat and procure some; and if the citizens disturb or interfere with my brave fellows, I'll bombard the town. There will be medicine to take on one side or the other, I swear." And loud and ready were the threats.

A pirate who carries with him an intended son-in-law is not likely, if he be of Blackbeard's turn of mind, to suffer for all his family plans to be ruined for the want of a few drugs.

An island with palm trees slowly rose on the horizon, and off this island it was that, after a good deal of tacking and close-hauling, the Revenge lay to to take in water, far better water than that which had been brought from Belize.

"Do you want to go ashore in the boat, boy?" said Blackbeard, really mindful of the health of this projected member of his family. "It may help your appetite to use your legs."

Dickory did not care to go anywhere, but he hardly said so when a revulsion of feeling came upon him, and turning away so that his face might not be noticed, he said he thought the land air might do him good. While the men were at work carrying their pails from the well-known spring to the water barrels in the boat, Dickory strolled about to view the scenery, for it could never have been expected that first lieutenant in uniform should help to carry water. At first the scenery did not appear to be very interesting, and Dickory wandered slowly from here to there, then sat down under a tree. Presently he rose and went to another tree, a little farther away from the boat and the men at the spring. Here he quietly took off his shoes and his stockings, and, having nothing else to do, made a little bundle of them, listlessly tying them to his belt; then he rose and walked away somewhat briskly, but not in the direction of the boat. He did not hurry, but even stopped sometimes to look at things, but he still walked a little briskly, and always away from the boat. He had been so used, this child of outdoor life, to going about the world barefooted, that it was no wonder that he walked briskly, being relieved of his encumbering shoes and stockings.

After a time he heard a shout behind him, and turning saw three men of the boat's crew upon a little eminence calling to him. Then he moved more quickly, always away from the boat, and with his head turned he saw the men running towards him, and their shouts became louder and wilder. Then he set off on a good run, and presently heard a pistol shot. This he knew was to frighten him and make him stop, but he ran faster and soon turned the corner of a bit of woods. Then he was away at the top of his speed, making for a jungle of foliage not a quarter of a mile before him. Shoots he heard, and more shots, but he caught sight of no pursuers. Urged on even as they were by the fear of returning to the ship without Dickory, they could not

After a time Dickory stopped running, for his path, always straight away, so far as he could judge, from the landing-place, became very difficult. In the forest there were streams, sometimes narrow and sometimes wide, and how deep he knew not, so that now he jumped, now he walked on fallen trees.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A GIRL WHO LAUGHED.

T WAS towards nightfall of the day on which

from the pirates at the spring that he found himself on a piece of high ground in an open place in the forest, and here he determined to spend the night. With his dirk he cut a quantity of palmetto leaves and made himself a very comfortable bed, on which he was soon asleep, fearing no pirates.

The man was now called away, and when he returned he said to Dickory: "Fear nothing, sir; your ship is no longer at the anchorage by the spring. She has sailed away, wisely concluding, I suppose, that pursuit of you would be folly, and even madness." During the meal Dickory briefly told his story, continuing it to a mere statement of his escape from the pirates. "Blackbeard!" exclaimed the man. "Truly you did well to get away from him, no matter into what tempests you plunged or upon what desert island you lost yourself. At any moment he might have turned upon you and cut you to pieces to amuse himself. I have heard the most horrible stories of Blackbeard."

"He treated me very well," said Dickory, "but I knew from his own words that he deserved me for a most horrid fate."

"What!" exclaimed the man, "and he told you? He is indeed a demon!" "Yes," said Dickory, "he said over and over again that he was going to take me to England to marry me to his daughter."

At this the wife could not restrain from a smile. "Matrimony is not generally considered a horrible fate," said she; "perhaps his daughter may be a most comely and estimable young person. Girls do not always resemble their fathers."

"Now tell me your story, I pray you," said Dickory. "But first, I would like very much to know how you found out that Blackbeard's ship was not at her anchorage?"

"That's a simple thing," said the man. "Of course you did not observe, for you could not, that from its eastern point where lies the spring, this island stretches in a long curve to the south, reaching northward again about this spot. Consequently, there is a little bay to the east of us, across which we can see the anchoring ground of such ships as may stop here for water. Your way around the land curve of the island was a long one, but the distance straight across the bay is but a few miles. Upon a hill not far from here there is a very tall tree, which overtops all the other trees, and to the upper branches of this tree my daughter, who is a great climber, frequently ascends with a small glass, and is thus able to report if there is a vessel at the anchorage."

"What!" exclaimed Dickory, "that little girl?"

"Oh, no!" said the man; "it is my other daughter, who is a grown young woman."

"She is not here now," said the mother. And this piece of unnecessary information was given in tones which might indicate that the young lady had stepped around to visit a neighbor.

"It is important," said the man, "that I should know if vessels have anchored here, for if they be merchantmen I sometimes do business with them."

"Business!" said Dickory. "That sounds extremely odd. Pray tell me how you came to be here."

"My name is Mander," said the other, "and about two years ago I was on my way from England to Barbadoes, where, with my wife and two girls, I expected to settle. We were captured by a pirate ship and marooned upon this island. I will say, to the pirate captain's credit, that he was a good sort of man considering his profession. He sailed across the bay on purpose to find a suitable place to land us, and he left us with some necessary articles, such as axes and tools, some kitchen utensils, and a gun with some ammunition. Then he sailed away, leaving us here, and here we have since lived. Under the circumstances, we have no right to complain, for had we been taken by an ordinary pirate it is likely that our bones would now be lying at the bottom of the ocean."

"Here I have worked hard and have made myself a home, such as it is. There are wild cattle upon the distant savannas, and I trap game and birds, cultivate the soil to a certain extent, and if we had clothes I might say we would be in better circumstances than many a respectable family in England. Sometimes when a merchantman anchors here and I have hides or anything else which we can barter for things we need, I row over the bay in a canoe which I have made, and have thus very much bettered our condition. But in no case have I been able to provide my family with suitable clothes."

"Why did you not get some of these merchant ships to carry you away?" asked Dickory.

The man shook his head. "There is no place," he said sadly, "to which I can in reason ask a ship to carry me and my family. We have no money, no property whatever. In any other place I would be far poorer than I am here. My children are not educated; my wife and I have done our best for them in that respect, and we have some books with us. So, as you see, it would be rash in me to leave a home which, rude as it is, shelters and supports my family, to go as paupers and strangers to some other land."

The wife heaved a sigh. "But poor Luella!" she said. "It is dreadful that she should be forced to grow up here."

"Luella?" asked Dickory.

"Yes, sir," she said, "my eldest daughter. But she is not here now."

Dickory thought that it was something odd that he should be again informed of a fact which he knew very well, but he made no remarks upon the subject.

Still wearing his cocked hat—for he had nothing else with which to shield his head from the sun—and with his uniform coat on, for he had not yet an opportunity of ripping from it the letter he carried, and this he would not part from—Dickory roamed about the little settlement. Mander was an industrious and thrifty man. His garden, his buildings, and his surroundings showed that.

Walking past a clump of low bushes, Dickory was startled by a laugh—a hearty laugh—the laugh of a girl. Looking quickly around, he saw, peering above the tops of the bushes, the face of the girl who had laughed.

"It is too funny!" she said, as his head fell upon her. "I never saw anything so funny in all my life. A man in regiments in this weather and upon a desert island. You look as if you had marched farther than your army, and that you had lost it in the forest."

Dickory smiled. "You ought not to laugh at me," he said, "for these clothes are really a great misfortune. If I could change them for something cool I should be more than delighted."

"Instead of that awful hat I can make you one of long grass. Do you see the one I have on? Isn't that a good hat? I have one nearly finished which I am making for my father; you may have that."

He accepted instantly the offer of the hat.

"You seem to know all about me," he said; "did you hear me tell my story?"

"Every word of it," said she, "and it is the queerest story I ever heard. Think of a pirate carrying a man away to marry him to his daughter!"

"But why don't you come from behind that bush and talk to me?"

"I can't do it," said she, "I am dressed funny that you are. Now I am going to make your hat." And in an instant she had departed.

Dickory now strolled on, and when he returned he seated himself in the shade near the house. His heavy coat and waistcoat lay upon the ground beside him, with the cocked hat placed upon them. As he leaned back against the tree and inhaled the fragrant breeze which came to him from the forest, Dickory was a more cheerful young man than he had been for many, many days. He thought of this himself, and wondered how a man, carrying with him his sentence of lifelong misery, could be against a tree and take pleasure in anything. He it a hospitable welcome, a sense of freedom from danger, a fragrant breeze, or the face of a pretty girl behind a bush. But these things did please him; he could not help it. And when presently came Mrs. Mander, brings a grass hat fresh from the manufacturer, he took it and put it on with more evident pleasure than the occasion seemed to demand.

"Your daughter is truly an artist," said Dickory.

"She does many things well," said the mother, "because necessity compels her and all of us to learn to work in various ways."

A little later Mander joined Dickory. "I am sorry, sir," said he, "that I am not able to present you to my daughter Luella. It is a great grief to us that her attire compels her to deny herself other company than that of her family. I really believe, sir, that it is Luella's deprivations on this island which form at present my principal discontent with my situation. But we all very good health.

to eat, and shelter over us, and should not complain."

As soon as he was at liberty to do so, Dickory walked by the hedge of low bushes, and there, above it, was the bright face, with the pretty grass hat.

"I was waiting for you," said she. "I wanted to see how that hat fitted, and I think it does nicely. And I wanted to tell you that I have been looking out for ships, but have not seen one. I don't mean by that that I want you to go away almost as soon as you have come, but of course, if a merchant ship should anchor here, it would be dreadful for you not to know."

"I am not sure," said Dickory gallantly, "that I am in a hurry for a ship. It is truly very pleasant here."

"What makes it pleasant?" said the girl.

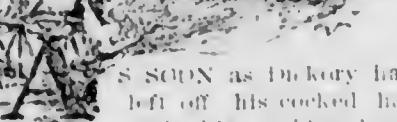

Dickory hesitated for a moment. "The breeze from the forest," said he. She laughed. "It is charming," she said, "but there are so many places where there is just as good a breeze, or perhaps better. How I would like to go to some one of them! To me this island is lonely and doleful. Every time I look over the sea for a ship I hope that one will come that can carry us away."

"Then," said Dickory, "I wish a ship would come to-morrow and take us all away together."

She shook her head. "As my father told you," said she, "we have no place to go to."

CHAPTER XXV.

LUCILLA'S SHIP

SOON as Dickory had left off his cocked hat and his gold-embroidered coat, the little girl Luella had ceased to be afraid of him, and the next morning she came to him, seated lonely—for this was a busy household—and asked him if he would like to take a walk.

It was about the middle of the afternoon, and Luella had dropped asleep beneath the tree where Dickory and her parents were conversing, when suddenly there rushed upon the little group a most surprising figure. At the first flash of thought Dickory supposed that a boy from the sky had dropped among them, but in an instant he recognized the face he had seen above the bushes. It was Luella, the daughter of the house! Upon her head was a little straw hat, and she wore a loose tunic and a pair of sailor's trousers, which had been cut off and were short enough to show that her feet and ankles were bare. Around her waist she had a belt of skins, from which dangled a string of crimson sea-beans. Her eyes were wide open, her face was pale, and she was trembling with excitement.

"What do you think?" she cried, not caring who was there or who might look at her. "There's a ship at the spring, and there's a boat rowing across the bay. A boat with four men in it!"

All started to their feet.

"A boat!" cried Mander, "with four men in it? Run, my dear, to the cave, press into its depths as far as you can. There is nothing there to be afraid of, and no matter how frightened you are, press into its most distant depths. You will remain with me, or would you rather escape? If it is a pirate ship, it may be Blackbeard who has returned." "Not so," cried Luella, "it is a merchant vessel, and they are making straight for the mouth of our stream." "I will stay here with you," said Dickory, "and stand by you, unless I may help your family seek the cave you speak of."

"No, no," said Mander, "they don't need you, and if you will do so we will go down to the beach and meet these men; that will be better than to have them search for us. They will know that people live here, for my canoe is drawn up on the beach."

"Is this safe?" cried Dickory; "would it not be better for you to go with your family and hide with them? I will meet the men in the boat."

"No, no," said Mander; "if their vessel is no pirate, I do not fear them. But I will not have them here."

Now, after Mander had embraced his family, they hurried away in tears, the girl Luella casting not one glance at Dickory. Impressed by the impulse that it was the proper thing to do, Dickory put on his coat and waistcoat and clapped upon his head his high cocked hat. Then he rapidly followed Mander to the beach, which they reached before the boat touched the sand.

When the man in the stern of the boat, which was now almost within hailing distance, saw the two figures run down upon the beach, he spoke to the oarsmen and they all stopped and looked around. The stop was occasioned by the sight of Dickory in his uniform; and this, under the circumstances, was enough to stop any boat's crew. Then they fell to again and pulled ashore. When the boat was beached one of its occupants, a roughly dressed man, sprang ashore and walked cautiously towards Mander; then he gave a great shout.

"Heigho, heigho!" he cried, "and Mander, this is you!"

Then there was great hand-shaking and many words.

"Excuse me, sir," said the man, raising his hat to Dickory, "I am now more than two years since I have seen my friend here, when he was marooned by pirates. We were all on the same merchantman, but the pirate took me along, leaving short of hands. I got away at last, sir" (all the time addressing Dickory instead of Mander, this being respect to his rank), "and shipping on board that brig, sir, I begged it of the captain that he would drop anchor here and take in water, although I cannot say it was needed, and give me a chance to land and see if my old friend he yet alive. I knew the spot, having well noted it when Mander and his family were unroomed."

"This is a great day for your friend and his family. But you must not lift your hat to me, for I am no officer."

For a long time, at least it seemed so to Dickory, who stood together on the sand and talked and shook hands and laughed and were truly thankful, the men who had come in the boat as much so as those who were found on the island. It was agreed, and there was no discussion on this point, that the Mander family should be carried away in the brig, which was an English vessel bound for Jamaica, but the happy Mander would not ask any of the boat's crew to visit him in his home. Instead he besought them to return to their vessel and bring back some clothes for women, if any such should be included in her cargo.

"My family," said he, "are not in the condition to venture themselves among well-clad people. They are, indeed, more like savages than we I myself."

"I don't," said Mander's friend, "if the ship carries goods of that description, but perhaps the captain might let you have a bale of cotton cloth, although I suppose—" and here he looked a little embarrassed.

"Oh, we can buy it," cried Dickory, taking some pieces of gold from his pocket, being coins which Blackbeard had furnished him, swearing that his first lieutenant could not feel like a true officer without money in his pocket, "take this and fetch the cloth. It nothing better can be had."

"Thank you," cried Mander; "my wife and daughters can soon fashion it into shape."

TOLD BY THE CIRCUS MAN.

Giant Made Big Hit When Displayed On River Steamer.

"The great giant never made a greater sensation," said the old circus man, "than he invariably did when seen on the upper deck of a steamboat."

"When we shipped from one town to another we commonly moved by the road, but sometimes when we were going to stop at two towns along the river and the distance between the two towns was great and the old man could make a profitableicker with the steamboat people, why, then'd make the skip by boat. And moving in this way the giant did tremendously advertise the show."

"You see, we couldn't have him crawl aboard a boat by the gangway between decks and curl himself up there somewhere below; we had to carry him where he could be seen by all."

"He would step up from the wharf to the steamboat's upper deck and stay right there straight through the trip in full view from the river's banks on either side, a man as tall as the steamboat's chimney. And seen walking or standing there as the boat came along, or sitting there maybe in a great armchair that we never failed to carry along for him, he made a sight that everybody along the river came out to see and looked at with wonder."

"And when we had come to where we were to land, where they could see the great giant close at hand, why, the people there looked at him in awe."

"All of which, as you can easily see, made business great for the show—in fact, we never hit a town any harder than when we hit it so."

Five Million Paper Bound Novels.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)

"The amount of paper-bound novels which are consumed annually in the United States is an interesting factor in the publishing business," said W. H. Knapp.

"Our firm has a yearly output of paper stuff amounting to about 1,500,000 copies. I supposed that about 5,000,000 copies are read annually in the United States. In addition to this is the avalanche of cheap cloth binding, which cost as little as the paper bindings. Yes, the summer resort business requires a large amount of our product—books that are read once and then thrown away."

"My sales this season have been better than at any time in the last ten years. One of the things which is cutting down our sales is the fact that publishers are now rebinding copyrighted fiction in cheap covers and throwing them on the market at prices which are but little above the price of paper covers or of classics and noncopyrighted fictions."

No Competition.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the relief and cure of bowel complaints both in children and adults has brought it into almost universal use, so that it is practically without a rival and as every one who has used it knows, is without an equal. Points for Stamp Collectors.

[See, Nichols.]

There is a growing difficulty in securing the copies of the early issue of United States stamps. The maker of these issues were not required by the Government to be careful in relation to the perforating of them. The paper was of a brittle quality, very easily broken or injured by careless handling. The postmasters who canceled these stamps cared for nothing except to thoroughly obliterate them, so they used unnecessary quantities of ink for the purpose.

All these things combined make it difficult to find used copies of the early issues of this country in fine condition. There were few collectors and therefore not many of these stamps were saved in unused condition. The consequence of this state of things is and will be an increasing difficulty in securing these stamps in condition as is acceptable to collectors who are at all particular as to the looks of their albums. There are vast numbers of United States stamps in poor ordinary condition. These many collectors take to fill the space in their albums until they can secure stamps of finer quality. This seems on the whole, to be a mistake, for the possession of a specimen, even though it be a poor one, causes a collector to neglect to secure another of the same stamp.

The desire to fill spaces that are vacant is greater than to improve those that are not properly filled. The best thing for the young collector, if he wishes to have a really pleasing is to put nothing into its space but unused, lightly canceled, clean copies of the stamps which he selects. The filling of the album properly will be appreciated within a year by those who care more for the issue of foreign countries, since the growing demand will make it even more difficult than it now is to obtain fine specimens.

Rubbing It In.

Ex-Secretary Elmer Root was talking about the humanity of judges.

"They are humane men," he said. "I could tell you many young stories of the pain they have suffered in the infliction of severe sentences. It is not altogether pleasant to be judge."

"That is why I cannot credit a story that was told me the other day about a judge in the West. A criminal, on trial before this man, had been found guilty. He was told to rise, and the judge said to him:

"Have you ever been sentenced to imprisonment before?"

"No your honor," said the criminal, and he burst into tears.

"Well," said the judge, "don't cry. You're going to be now."

Protection Makes Opportunities.

(Bradford (Pa.) "Star.")

It is impossible to study the Tariff system of the United States inductively, giving due heed to the influences of our system upon the industry of the country, without noting the important part played by protection in making opportunities. Amidst all our prosperity, the rise and fall in prices, the betterment of the conditions in industry and the sudden decline and fall of many of these modern creations, the one striking fact which stands out in the forefront of it all is that the Protective System has furnished the opportunities for capital and labor, has diversified our industries and made the United States the chief manufacturing and produc-

For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. FRIDAY, JUNE 10.

RELICS OF WAR.

Ammunition Left by Strikers Found in Hopkins County.

A Flour Barrel Full of Cartridges Discovered by Boys While Playing.

Earlington, Ky., June 4.—A sensational discovery has been made by boys at Boxtown, in the southwestern part of Hopkins county, which is believed to be a relic of the famous Carbondale battle, fought between three deputies and a body of more than one hundred marching union miners near Boxtown on Monday, January 21, 1901.

The find is a large quantity of long-range cartridges. They were found on the side of the creek bed near Boxtown where they had been secreted in sacks. Esquire Frank B. Sisk, road surveyor for Hopkins county, came to town early this morning with several of these cartridges. The bullets were considerably corroded from having been buried in wet ground for many months. They were Winchester .38 and .38-55 and Peter's .38-55 caliber.

These were got from two boys, who had a blasting powder can full; and he says there were other varieties in the lot, including nickel steel jacketed bullets such as are used in Mausers and other long guns. The boys told of distribution by the basket full from the load of cartridges found and the understanding was that they would fill a flour barrel.

The character, condition and location of the cartridges found, together with the history of the union movement in that quarter of Hopkins county support the theory that this ammunition was buried by the union leaders after the disastrous ending of the Carbondale battle, the first open demonstration of force in the campaign to unionize Hopkins county. In this battle two leaders of the union party were killed and horse ridden by a deputy was shot through the head. The three deputies who participated in the shooting were arrested upon charge of murder but after two trials were acquitted.

Boxtown was the union headquarters and at the unions hall there, the party of miners formed in marching order and marched toward Carbondale and Crabtree miners before the battle. Boxtown was still headquarters some months later when a body of unionists fired upon a party of deputies who were going to serve warrants on union men in St. Charles.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

White Woman's Child Has Negro Father in Union County.

The Woman Drowns the Babe and Says She Did It On His Order.

The criminal history of Union county has on none of its pages a more horrible, a more revolting, a more heinous crime than the infanticide with which Victoria Allen, white, and Sam Henshaw, colored, are charged, says the Morganfield Sun.

It is difficult to understand how a woman can sink so low in the mire of degradation, for not only is the Allen woman guilty of carnal knowledge of a black paramour, but she is also guilty of murdering her own flesh and blood.

In the last issue of the Sun was published an account of the finding of a babe on the river bank near Raleigh. The coroner's inquest developed facts that convinced Coroner Drury there had been foul play, and he went to work on the case.

It was known that a mulatto child had been born to the Allen woman, an inquiry revealed the fact that the babe had not been seen for several days.

The woman was located in Illinois over on Saline river, by Coroner Drury and he went after her. She agreed to return to Kentucky with out requisition papers and Tuesday county.

To-day, with Colorado in a state of anarchy, with the Governor standing pat for the rights of the mine owners with the militia quartered on hall a dozen camps widely separated, a reign of terror exists, the like of which was never known in this country.

It is a fight for existence with the Miners' Union, and for the State, the sole aim is to break the backbone of the labor organization.

with it or he would kill her. She was afraid of the negro and the threat caused her to add murder to the guilty life she had been leading.

Victoria Allen is a white woman about forty years old, and is by no means a wretched looking creature. She is married and has lived near Raleigh a number of years. It is said her husband failed to provide for her and her children and that she went to Sam Henshaw's to live. It has been suspected for some time that her relationship with Sam Henshaw was improper.

Henshaw is a disreputable negro about sixty-five or seventy years of age.

Anarchy Reigns in Colorado. Fourteen years ago what is known as the Cripple Creek district in Colorado, was a ranch, mortgaged and considered worthless. The mountains were filled with prospect holes, and the owners were harassed by suits for damages for cattle lost by falling in them.

The mortgagee foreclosed. W. S. Stratton soon after discovered the Independence mine, and in three years the camp grew to great importance. To-day it is the greatest gold producer in the world. Labor troubles have been its nemesis from the beginning. In 1894, and in 1898 and in 1901 the miners were in open rebellion.

To-day, with Colorado in a state of anarchy, with the Governor standing pat for the rights of the mine owners with the militia quartered on hall a dozen camps widely separated, a reign of terror exists, the like of which was never known in this country.

It is a fight for existence with the Miners' Union, and for the State, the sole aim is to break the backbone of the labor organization.
